BACKGROUND

Durgalaxmi Multiple Campus, an emerging academic institution of Far Western region is located in Attariya, gateway to the entire Far Western province, Kailali, Nepal. The campus is established by the joint effort of local community, politicians, academicians, and other stake holders in 2063 B.S. to provide the light of education to the students for higher education belonging to local community as well as the entire Far West including the students of poor, Ethnic, Dalit, Janajati and other educationally disadvantaged groups. The campus aims to fulfill the demand of higher education of the students who, previously, were forced to go far away from the home for the same.

The campus aims to provide quality education in affordable cost through qualified, dedicated, energetic and experienced faculties and well management and administration system using latest trends and technology in the field of education. The campus has provision of scholarship, and other grants for the deserving and needy students to bring them into the mainstream of the education and national development.

The campus has its own physical infrastructures constructed in its own land. It has an academic building which includes administration section, library, campus office, account section and staff room. There is easy availability of clean drinking water, separate toilets for girls and boys, and staff. The campus has systematic parking area, garden and plantation area inside the campus premises. The campus is protected by compound wall and wired fence with two gates for entry and exit. The campus uses computer and other information technologies for academic and administrative activities.

The campus is constituted to Far-Western University in 2075 B.S., hence it follows the rules and regulations as directed by the university.
